Good morning Mr. Jacobs,

If the news reports are true that you and NOAA director of public affairs, Julie Kay Roberts warned your staff not to contradict trump when he purposely sent out false and misleading information about Hurricane Dorian to the American people, then you must immediately step down from your positions of power. As a respected American government and scientific institution, people rely on you for accurate and timely information. That information is a safety issue. But when you purposely allow false and misleading information to be given to the American public in your name, that puts American citizens lives at risk. Your duty is to the American people, not to the president and his political agenda.

Sincerely,

Mr. Joshua Bickford
